Hello,

Thanks for writing the Partner Development Director spec the way you did. The line that got my attention asks for a builder, someone creating new partnership motions rather than managing an established programme. That is the half of this work I am actually good at.

Firstly - the closest thing I have done to this role. An Australian IoT company had a Roche Diagnostics relationship with very little coming out of it, and no European channel at all. I expanded it into an exclusive global reseller agreement, seven figures on a three-year minimum.

It then stalled inside Roche's Legal/Compliance review, which is where most of these die. I kept their commercial sponsors visible so the process carried business pressure, whilst holding our side firm on exclusivity and the minimum. That channel produced multiple NHS sales and a ten-year contract with OLVG in the Netherlands.

On building where no playbook exists, I opened Asia-Pacific for Encoding.com off a market-entry thesis I wrote myself. No presence, no partners. Qualified pipeline up 1200% and APAC's largest systems integrator signed.

At Brightcove I recruited 15+ ISV and technology partners and that channel drove 35% of regional pipeline, whilst I grew the region from ~$4M to ~$11.5M ARR.

In terms of the AI-enabled workflows you ask for, I build them. Claude API agents, a production MCP server, lead scoring/enrichment and partner reporting dashboards. I built those myself instead of waiting on an engineering queue.

I think that is rarer than the partnerships CV, and it means I can hold the conversation with a partner's product/engineering team without a solutions engineer sat next to me. I came up Senior Solutions Engineer to Technical Director to VP, off an engineering degree.

To be clear on the gap. I have not built hyperscaler marketplace listings or run a formal AWS/GCP co-sell programme, so I would be learning that mechanic. The ecosystem thinking and the from-nothing build I already have.

One thing worth raising early, since the posting names the UK. I work fully remote from Valencia on CET, which is central to EMEA, and I hold a UK passport and a UK number. Travel at the level you describe is how I have always worked this job.

So with that in mind - it would help to understand whether the UK line is about an employing entity or about being inside the region, and which entity would contract someone resident in Spain.

I have run a business across borders and time zones literally from a 40-foot boat. Remote is simply how I work.

Happy to hop on a call to talk through any of the above. CV attached.

Thanks,
Ben Morrell
