Dear Hiring Team,

I have run the mandate you are describing. At Brightcove I inherited a region with talented sellers, a reactive account base, and pipeline that leaned on inbound — and built it into a data-driven sales organisation of 20+ across new business, account management, and pre-sales, growing recurring revenue from ~$4M to ~$11.5M ARR as Vice President.

The specifics map closely to your brief. Account management moved from reactive to proactive through segmentation and strategic account planning, growing average account value from $40K to $250K+ ACV. Pipeline generation stopped depending on marketing: we hunted above run-rate, hit 120%+ of quota every year, and closed the company's largest global deal, $12M over three years. And it was built through managers, not around them — I managed managers, kept turnover under 10%, and promoted 80% of our AEs from within.

Two things in your nice-to-have list are, for me, core. I build revenue operations myself: at Livepeer I stood up the full commercial operating system — forecasting, deal and contracting cadence, CRM as the single frame of reference — so a HubSpot implementation is territory I know from the inside. And I integrate AI into sales processes hands-on, building my own outbound automation, lead scoring, and AI agents. On partner economics: I structured a 7-figure, 3-year exclusive global reseller agreement through the Roche Diagnostics channel, which drove multiple NHS wins and a 10-year contract in the Netherlands.

I have also run a business across borders and time zones, literally from a 40-foot boat: remote and self-directed is simply how I work — and monthly time in Northwest England is no obstacle.

I would welcome a conversation about what the first two quarters of this role should deliver.

Best regards,
Ben Morrell
