Hello Hightouch team,

Thank you for the opportunity to put myself forward for Technical Account Manager, EMEA.

On retention and expansion of your largest customers, I have a number rather than an opinion. The accounts I was technically responsible for at Brightcove went from $40K to $250K+ in average account value, and the region from ~$4M to ~$11.5M ARR. Existing customers adding teams, products and markets, not new logos.

Firstly - the arc. I joined Brightcove as a Senior Solutions Engineer and became Technical Director, technically responsible for all sales and customers across 15+ countries, then VP of the region. Solution design, onboarding/enablement, best-practice guidance, and the escalation path when a live platform broke. Hundreds of customers, mid-market up to the largest in Asia.

On escalations my grounding is literal. I ran on-call incident process management for 24/7 live broadcast output at Nine Network, where root cause analysis happened against a transmission deadline that could not move.

I also designed and delivered that broadcaster's entire digital presence for the Beijing 2008 Olympics on my own, with 8 weeks on the ground in Beijing. Onboarding an enterprise customer to a date is a familiar kind of pressure.

In terms of the technical half, your users are data teams and I build. LLM applications on the Claude API, a production MCP server, API integrations, CRM data sync and my own reporting dashboards. MEng Electronic Engineering underneath all of it.

To be clear - I am not a warehouse specialist. No dbt models or Snowflake in production. I would be learning your stack properly in month one rather than arriving with it.

Worth saying plainly: this is an IC seat whilst my last operating title was VP. That is deliberate. Six years advising 20+ founders has been six years wide, and what I want now is depth.

One product, a set of accounts held long enough that the work compounds. I think warehouse-native is the argument that wins this category, which is a reason to want these accounts rather than just a job.

One practical note. I am fully remote from Valencia on UK time ±1h and I am engaged through a non-Spanish entity, so it would help to know early which entity engages an EMEA hire. I have run a business across borders and time zones literally from a 40-foot boat, so remote and self-directed is simply how I work.

Happy to hop on a call to talk through any of the above. CV attached.

Thanks again and looking forward to hearing from you,
Ben Morrell
