Hello RemotePass team,

Thank you for a posting that says what the job is. "Build the target lists, run the outreach, take the meetings and negotiate the agreements yourself" is the work I have done most, and I am applying for a hands-on seat on purpose.

The closest match is Watching That, a London streaming-data company with no partnerships function. I built it from nothing, then signed Brightcove as their largest partner after a 3-4 year chase, and three more across Europe/US/APAC. At Livepeer I did the measurement half of the same job: forecasting, contracting cadence and CRM, so partner contribution could be defended.

In terms of the commercial model - the deal I would point to is Roche Diagnostics. For a small IoT company I negotiated an exclusive global reseller agreement, seven figures on a three-year minimum, with an $80B counterparty: the reseller terms, the exclusivity, the minimum commitment and the activation plan. It stalled in Roche's legal process and got signed because I kept their commercial sponsors visible and held the founder firm on the economics. That channel produced the NHS sales and a ten-year OLVG contract. Roche's people were advisers to their customers, not buyers, the same conversation you describe with professional services firms.

At scale, at Brightcove, I recruited 15+ ISV and agency partners across Asia and ran the global partner programme regionally, tiers and rules of engagement with the direct team included. That channel grew to 35% of regional pipeline whilst the region went from ~$4M to ~$11.5M ARR.

To be clear - I was a VP there and led a 20-person team. I am choosing a build seat because building the function is the part I am good at. On your go-to-market engineer, I build my own GTM tooling (AI agents, CRM integrations, lead scoring), so that will probably be the easiest working relationship in the company.

Lastly - I have been your customer's worker for seven years, contracting across borders from Spain and for four of those years from a 40-foot boat. Remote and self-directed is simply how I work, and I know what your product has to get right.

So - happy to hop on a 20-minute call to talk through which partner segments come first.

Thanks again and looking forward to hearing from you,
Ben Morrell
