Ben Morrell

Technology Partnerships Leader — Developer Platforms · AI · Europe

hello@benmorrell.co · +34 711 035 948 · linkedin.com/in/morrellbc · benmorrell.co/desertant-partnerships
+44 7796 656 897 · Remote (Valencia, Spain) · UK / Australian Citizen · Spain Digital Nomad Visa

Hello Desert Ant team,

Thank you for a posting written by people who do the work. “Follow each integration until it launches” is the line that made me apply. Most partnerships people hand that part off, and it is probably the part I do best.

The closest match is Watching That, a London streaming-data company with no partnerships function. I was the function. I found the targets, ran the calls, wrote the proposals and signed Brightcove, a platform they had chased for 3-4 years, then three more across Europe/US/APAC. For Mux I built a qualified APAC partner pipeline of 15 in six months.

In terms of the demo - I started as an engineer (MEng Electronic Engineering) and went Senior Solutions Engineer to Technical Director to VP at Brightcove. The partner channel there reached 35% of regional pipeline whilst the region grew from ~$4M to ~$11.5M ARR.

I also build. My own products run on the Claude API (agents/MCP servers etc.) and I pay the per-call bill on them. No per-call cost and nothing leaving the device is a pitch I would buy before I sold it.

Your Clips number, 0.3kWh against ~140kWh for the Sonnet call it replaced in Detail, is the slide I would open with.

To be clear - I have not shipped an on-device model or sold into a data-sovereignty programme. What I bring is the video and audio side. Clear, Clips, Who and Align solve problems I spent 18 years around, and I know people at the video platforms that would put them in front of users.

On pricing and terms with founders, the deal I would point to is Roche Diagnostics: an exclusive global reseller agreement for a small IoT company, seven figures on a three-year minimum. It stalled in Roche’s legal process. It got signed because I kept Roche’s sponsors visible and held the founder firm on exclusivity.

I live in Valencia, on CET. I ran a business across borders and time zones for four years from a 40-foot boat, so remote and self-directed is simply how I work.

So - happy to hop on a call and walk through which partners I would go after first.

Thanks again and looking forward to hearing from you,
Ben Morrell