Hi Yolande,

Thank you for the opportunity to put forward an application for the Director, Revenue Operations seat. The application is in through the careers site. This is the longer version.

Firstly - the anchor. When the DANA floods hit Valencia in October 2024, my home city, I pointed family and friends at where to give and then went out on the volunteer drives.

By the time we reached the worst-hit towns it was too late for many people there. The effort was organised and still ineffective. I think that is the argument for your model: money in people's hands first, and fast.

In terms of the job - the operating backbone is the work I have done most. At Livepeer I built the commercial operating system from nothing: forecasting, the contracting cadence, documentation, training and the CRM as the single frame of reference.

At Brightcove I ran a 15-country region as VP, so the pipeline reviews, the forecast to US headquarters and the workforce planning sat with me.

The less usual part: I build the systems myself. CRM integrations, lead scoring, dashboards, a pricing engine, AI agents. So the fundraising tech and data workstream is one I can do as well as run.

To be clear on the gaps - I have not run a fundraising function, and nonprofit fund accounting is new to me. I would rather learn restricted-fund coding from your Finance team than pretend. No Africa donor experience either.

On influence outside the reporting line: a seven-figure reseller agreement I negotiated through Roche Diagnostics stalled in their legal and compliance machinery. It got signed because I kept the sponsors inside Roche visible and answered every compliance question fast. That is the liaison job, seen from the other side.

I work fully remote from Valencia, and I ran a business across borders and time zones for four and a half years from a 40-foot boat. Remote and self-directed is simply how I work.

So - happy to hop on a call to talk through any of the above, and to hear how you want the Fundraising backbone to look in twelve months.

Thanks Yolande,
Ben Morrell
