Hi Simona,

Thank you for the opportunity to put myself forward for the Partner Development Manager role. Taking a partner programme from early stage to a repeatable motion is the work I have done most, and I would like to do it for ClusterControl and CCX.

At Brightcove I recruited 15+ ISV and agency partners across Asia. The partner channel grew to drive 35% of regional pipeline, and sales forecast against that number every quarter, so it had to hold up.

Over the same years I led the region from ~$4M to ~$11.5M ARR, at 120%+ of quota every year.

The closest thing to your brief is probably Roche. A small medical IoT company had no European channel. I went after Roche Diagnostics and got to an exclusive global reseller agreement, seven figures over a three-year minimum.

Most of the effort went into getting it through Roche's legal and compliance process. Revenue followed through the partner: NHS sales and a ten-year contract with OLVG in the Netherlands.

Before that, at Watching That, I built the partnerships function from scratch and signed Brightcove, a partner they had chased for 3-4 years.

In terms of the technical side - I started as an engineer. MEng, then 24/7 live broadcast operations at Nine Network, then presales through to Technical Director at Brightcove.

To be clear, I am not a DBA. But I have run infrastructure in production, been the one on call, and I can sit with a hosting provider's engineers and talk about what failover and backups mean for their customers.

I also build my own GTM tooling (AI agents, HubSpot/CRM automation). I think that matters when one person owns the whole partner pipeline.

I work fully remote from Valencia, on CET, on a B2B contract. I have done that across a lot of time zones, including four years running a business from a sailboat.

Happy to hop on a call to talk through how you see the first year of the programme.

Thanks Simona,
Ben Morrell
