Hello Goodwall team,

Thanks for writing the honest version of this role. Several 6-7 figure partnerships, most of the pipeline self-built, bespoke rather than off a playbook. I have spent a lot of eighteen years on the small side of the table from very large organisations.

For an Australian IoT vendor with no European presence, I turned one Roche Diagnostics relationship into an exclusive global reseller agreement, seven figures on a three-year minimum. I sourced it by outreach and built the case from nothing. Then it stalled inside Legal/Compliance at an $80B business.

Unsticking it meant working both sides at once. I kept Roche's commercial sponsors visible, so the process carried business pressure rather than sitting in a queue. On our side I pushed the founder to concede on policy whilst holding firm on exclusivity/minimum commitment. It signed, and that channel produced multiple NHS sales plus a ten-year contract with OLVG in Amsterdam.

Firstly - on building your own pipeline. I opened Asia Pacific for Encoding.com off a market-entry thesis I wrote myself, which moved qualified pipeline 1200%. At Watching That I built the partnerships function from zero and signed Brightcove, chased by them for three or four years.

In terms of why Goodwall - your flagship programmes are AI fluency, with Microsoft/HP, GitHub and Cognizant. I build with these models rather than briefing someone who does: Claude/Anthropic API applications, AI agents, a production MCP server. So in a partner's room I can talk about what a course should teach, and not only the commercials.

To be clear on the gap - I have sold to IT/product and clinical budgets, never to a CSR or foundation budget. The buyer is new to me. The shape of the deal is not.

The youth-development half is genuine, if unpaid. I founded lacrosse clubs on two continents, ran one as President for three years and grew it to 80 members. 80% of AE promotions on my Brightcove team were people we developed in-house.

One qualifier. I am applying for Global remote, from Valencia on CET, engaged through a non-Spanish entity. I ran a business across nine countries from a 40-foot sailboat, so self-directed is simply how I work.

Happy to hop on a call to talk through any of the above. I think compensation and the real travel number are probably worth getting straight early, whilst the rest looks fairly straightforward.

Thanks for your time and your consideration,
Ben Morrell
