Hello Eran,

Thank you for the opportunity to put forward an application for the Senior Director of International Sales role.

The closest thing I have done to this job is Brightcove Asia. That was a video SaaS region across 15+ countries, selling to broadcasters and media groups (Sony Pictures Networks, Mediacorp, Astro etc.), with managers under me in Singapore, Mumbai and New Delhi.

As VP I grew the region from ~$4M to ~$11.5M ARR and hit 120%+ of quota every year. When pipeline alone would not make the number, I went after the large deals above run-rate. The team closed Brightcove's largest global deal, $12M over three years.

In terms of coaching - 80% of our AE promotions were home-grown and turnover stayed under 10% in a very competitive hiring market. Customer success sat in the same team, and average account value went from $40K to $250K+ through renewals and expansion.

Process is the other half. At Livepeer I built the commercial operating system from scratch with the CRM at the centre: forecasting, contracting cadence, documentation, team training. Salesforce and HubSpot are both familiar.

On the buyer side, I opened the UK for an edtech and signed a UK university. In life sciences I negotiated a Roche Diagnostics reseller agreement that produced NHS sales and a ten-year contract with OLVG's lab.

To be clear - I managed managers for about two years, not eight. What I would bring instead is an engineer's habit. I build my own pipeline and GTM tooling (AI agents, lead scoring, CRM integrations), so the KPI layer in the posting is probably something I would instrument in the first month rather than ask for.

Fully remote from Valencia, on CET with good overlap into both APAC mornings and US afternoons. UK citizen.

So - happy to hop on a call to talk through where EMEA and APAC stand today and what you need from the seat. CV attached.

Thanks Eran,
Ben Morrell
