Dear CrowdStrike Hiring Team,

At Brightcove I recruited 15+ strategic ISV and agency partners and built a channel that drove 35% of regional pipeline, while running the regional execution of the global partner programs across ISVs, systems integrators and resellers. Building Europe's partner ecosystem across ISVs, cloud providers, SIs, resellers and MSSPs, and making it a predictable, partner-sourced revenue engine, is the work I want to do next.

The through-line of my career is turning partnerships into revenue at scale. Through revenuesystem I negotiated an exclusive global reseller agreement through the Roche Diagnostics ($80B) channel, a 7-figure, three-year alliance that went on to drive multiple NHS sales and a 10-year deal in the Netherlands. It was won the way strategic alliances are: mapping the partner's own commercial incentives, building executive-level relationships, and feeding technical insight back into the product so co-sell actually worked in the field. At Livepeer I signed Tier-1 technology partnerships including Aptos ($500K) and, just as importantly, built the operating model behind them, the forecasting, contracting cadence and CRM discipline that make partner-sourced pipeline reviewable and repeatable rather than anecdotal.

Two things set me apart for an AI-native platform. First, I am genuinely t-shaped: an MEng and a career that started in engineering, so I hold my own in a partner's technical review as easily as in a QBR. Second, I build. I ship my own AI GTM tooling and a production MCP server, and I use AI to drive decisions and workflow, exactly the leverage this team will expect its leaders to model.

I've run a business across borders and time zones, literally from a 40-foot boat: remote and self-directed is simply how I work. I'd welcome the chance to discuss how I'd build and scale Europe's alliances organisation for CrowdStrike.

Best regards,
Ben Morrell
