Hi Tim,

Thank you for the opportunity to put forward an application for the Senior Strategic Partner Development Manager seat. CV attached. The short version: each of the three partner types in the spec has a deal I can point to, and I am probably closer to a Coder user than most applicants.

Firstly - resellers. For a small IoT company with no EU channel I negotiated an exclusive global reseller agreement through Roche Diagnostics, seven figures on a three-year minimum. It stalled in their legal/compliance process and got signed because I kept the commercial sponsors visible. That channel then produced the NHS sales and a ten-year contract with OLVG.

System integrators: at Encoding.com I opened APAC from a written thesis and signed the region's largest SI as a partner. I also spent two years inside an SI early on (Gencom, Sydney), so I know how an integrator makes money on a vendor.

At scale, at Brightcove, I recruited 15+ ISV, agency and reseller partners and ran the global partner programme regionally: joint business plans, executive QBRs, technical enablement, co-marketing. The channel reached 35% of regional pipeline whilst the region grew from ~$4M to ~$11.5M ARR with me as VP.

In terms of the technology - I am an engineer first (MEng, then Solutions Engineer to VP). I use Claude Code every day and build my own agents and a production MCP server on the Claude API. So when a partner's platform team asks how governed environments hold up with agentic workflows, I can answer from use rather than the deck.

To be clear - I have not worked at a DevOps tooling vendor. My platforms have been developer-facing API businesses (video infrastructure, encoding etc.). I would rather say that than pretend.

On the practical side - fully remote from Valencia, UK citizen with a UK number, fine with the 30% travel. I think running the International region from Spain via the London entity is a first-call question rather than a letter one.

So - happy to hop on a call to talk through where the International partner map should start.

Thanks Tim,
Ben Morrell
