Dear ElevenLabs Hiring Team,

Building a regional partner programme from nothing is the part of the job I like most. At Watching That I stood up the partnerships function from scratch and signed Brightcove — a partner the company had chased for three to four years — plus a set of resellers and technology partners across Europe, the US and APAC. That is the 0→1 motion your Southern Europe role is asking for, and I have run it more than once.

I have owned the reseller, systems-integrator and consulting-partner side end-to-end. Opening APAC for Encoding.com from a written market-entry thesis, I signed the region's largest systems integrator and grew qualified pipeline 1200%. At Brightcove I recruited 15+ ISV and agency partners that drove 35% of regional pipeline, and ran regional execution of the global partner programme. Through revenuesystem I landed an exclusive global reseller agreement through the Roche Diagnostics channel. Across all of it the pattern is the same: design the programme, build the partner relationships, wire co-sell into the sales motion, and scale it against a number.

What should make me useful specifically to ElevenLabs is the technical half. My background is an MEng and a presales-to-VP path, and today I build production AI tooling hands-on — LLM/API applications and an MCP server among them. "Comfortable with technical, API-driven products" is not a box I tick; it is how I work, which matters when you are enabling integrators and resellers to build on a voice-AI API.

I am based in Valencia and work fully remote by design — I once ran a business, and Encoding.com's EMEA/APAC expansion, from a 40-foot boat across nine countries, so self-directed delivery across time zones is simply how I operate. I would welcome a conversation about building the Southern Europe partner programme.

Best regards,
Ben Morrell
